Toyo Seikan Kaisha, Ltd. Completes Acquisition of Stolle Machinery Company, LLC

As announced in the press release “Announcement regarding the Acquisition of Stolle Machinery Company, LLC” dated September 30, 2011, Toyo Seikan Kaisha, Ltd. (“Toyo Seikan”) has conducted certain procedures including application to relevant competition authority in connection with the acquisition of Stolle Machinery Company, LLC (“Stolle”). Upon completion of the procedures required for the implementation of such acquisition, Toyo Seikan announces that on November 4, 2011 (Japan Time), TSK Merger Corporation, a special purpose vehicle and wholly-owned subsidiary of Toyo Seikan, was merged into Can Machinery Holdings, Inc. (“Can Machinery”), which indirectly holds all shares of Stolle (the “Merger”). As a result of the Merger, in which Can Machinery is the surviving entity, the acquisition of Stolle by Toyo Seikan has been completed, and Stolle has become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Toyo Seikan.

Please note that the impact on Toyo Seikan’s consolidated financial performance for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2012 as a result of the acquisition is expected to be minimal.
